

Senator Barack Obama
713 Hart Senate Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator Obama:

As the administration prepares and presents its budget request for fiscal year 2006, I am writing to urge you to support full funding for U.S. federal nutrition programs that provide immediate assistance to hungry and poor people.

For several years now, the number of people who struggle to put food on the table has been rising. The problem now affects more than 36 million people in our country—13 million of them children. Yet back in 1996, our government pledged to cut food insecurity in half by 2010. If we are to fulfill this commitment, Congress must ensure that national nutrition programs, such as food stamps and school meals, receive enough funding to serve all eligible people.

These programs help provide low-income families with the nutritious food they need to grow, learn and work. The federal budget should reflect nutrition programs' important contribution to the welfare and future of our people.

Sincerely,

---

Name

---

Address

---

City, State, Zip

Senator Richard Durbin
332 Dirksen Senate Office Building
Washington DC 20510

Dear Senator Durbin:

As the administration prepares and presents its budget request for fiscal year 2006, I am writing to urge you to support full funding for U.S. federal nutrition programs that provide immediate assistance to hungry and poor people.

For several years now, the number of people who struggle to put food on the table has been rising. The problem now affects more than 36 million people in our country—13 million of them children. Yet back in 1996, our government pledged to cut food insecurity in half by 2010. If we are to fulfill this commitment, Congress must ensure that national nutrition programs, such as food stamps and school meals, receive enough funding to serve all eligible people.

These programs help provide low-income families with the nutritious food they need to grow, learn and work. The federal budget should reflect nutrition programs' important contribution to the welfare and future of our people.

Sincerely,

---

Name

---

Address

---

City, State, Zip